day trips, stock control, personal care, safe guarding, driving, are all duties within this role.

As written by the client:

"I am studying History at Manchester University. I have decided to live independently in an anexe on my families home. I travel into Uni each day or as my course dictates with a member of my support team. I have cerebral palsy which affects all four limbs. I use a powered wheelchair with an attendant control. I have a good sense of humour and love films and music, all genres. I enjoy watching gaming and like to play myself with assistance. I have been trying out switch control system. I have a small dog, who likes to be with me occasionally whilst I am at home and I would need help to walk him on an occasion. This is a busy role but there is also room for some down time each day. I am looking for someone who would find this role rewarding and enjoyable but also someone with an interest to help me develop my independence further.
